For May 2022

Economic Update

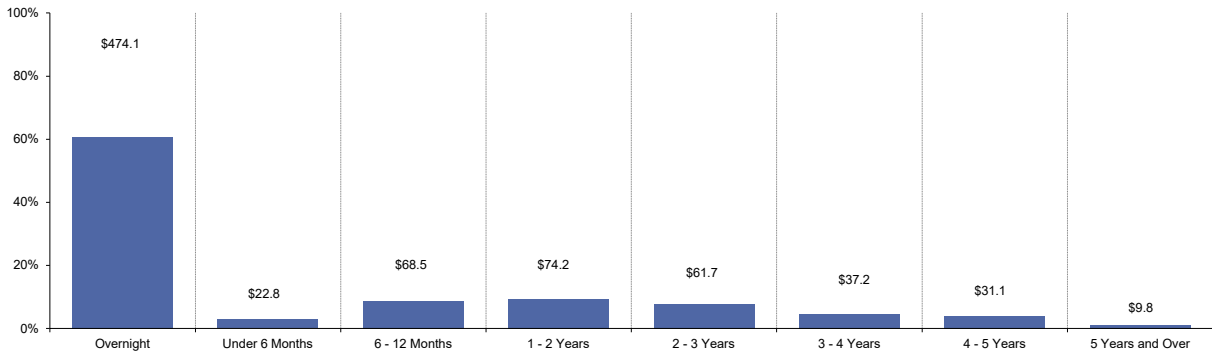

On May 4, the Federal Reserve (Fed) increased the fed funds rate by a half percent to a new target range of 0.75% to 1.00%. Labor markets remained strong. Despite worker shortages, the U.S. economy added 428,000 jobs in April, bringing total job gains to nearly 2.1 million jobs so far in 2022. The Consumer Price Index (CPI) rose by 8.3% year-over-year through April, just off March's 40-year high.

Looking Ahead

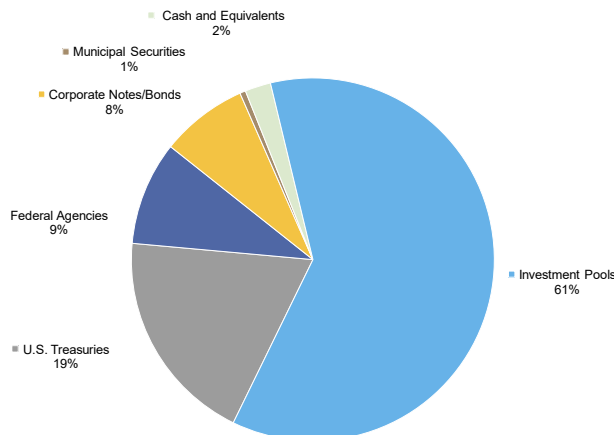

The Fed is expected to continue tightening monetary policy, with rate increases of 50 bps now expected for the June, July and possibly September meetings. Although much of the expected increases are already captured in the term structure of today's yield curve, we plan to continue to maintain a modestly defensive duration bias relative to benchmarks.
